Specification

The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: the "Related Application" data should be updated to provide the most current status (e.g. US Patent Number).

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Edwards et al (5,588,960).

As shown in Figure 2, Edwards et al disclose a catheter assembly comprising a catheter tube (26) having an operative element (i.e. distal tip 22b) including a plurality of fluid-conveying ports through the various electrodes (41). A manifold body (67) is carried within the catheter and includes a single main fluid junction (71) coupled to a fluid source external to the catheter. Multiple branch fluid junctions (98) are each coupled to a fluid port (41a) for delivery of a fluid through conveying ports on the electrode. With regard to claim 3, the recitation of conveying an "irrigation fluid" is deemed intended use since the device is not specifically connected to an irrigation source to enable the function. The Edwards et al device delivers an agent to tissue, which agent may also be deemed an "irrigant". The method of making the device, including placing the manifold within the catheter body, is intuitive to the Edwards et al disclosure.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Lafontaine (6,989,009) disclose a cryo-catheter that includes a manifold means at the distal end of the catheter. Vanney (2005/0004565) discloses a catheter with a distal manifold for distributing fluid to various fluid outlets (see Figures 5-10).
